

Figure 1: Illustration of high-energy particles being identified by consecutive types of subdetectors in a typical collider experiment. The curvature of the tracks in the magnetic field is not shown for simplicity.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons
“Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International” license.

